By CHARLES P STEWART. (European Manager of the United Press.) LONDON-The English Liberal party leaders have finally pretty definitely made up their minds what to do with the House of Lords in case they win at the coming national election.

Whatever plan may be adopted for genuinely popularizing England's government will involve such radical changes in the country's present Jegislative system that much difference of opinion has naturally existed both as to ends and methods. The extreme radicals have advocated the complete abolition of the second chamber. Those of a more moderate type demanded an elective upper nouse. The question of government ownership of the telephone service came before the Conservative convention and a resolution was unanimously adopted calling upon the present government to acquire the telephone systems of the province and operate them as a government institution. As this convention is practically the voice of the Conservative party, it may be taken that government-owned telephones will become part of its policy, as is now the case in Alberta and Saskatchewan.

It will also be the policy of the government to discourage speculation in grown lands, which are to be reserved to a large extent for bona fide settlers. It is the intention to bring about a WESTERN AFRICA material reduction in taxation, which is made possible by the increased prosperity of the province.

BUDAPEST, Hungary - The first important discovery of natural gas in Europe is reported from Kis-Sarmas, in the district of Klausenburg.

Its presence first became known two years ago, when shepherd boys used to light the vapors rising from the marshes. Upon a geologist's report the ministry of finance directed borings to be made. when large quantities of gas were discovered at a depth of 60 feet. The borings were continued to a depth of 600 feet, when the gas was found in such volume that big stones were thrown into

FOR PALM BEACH

NEW YORK-Entry blanks for the ixth annual regatta of the Palm Beach Power Boat Association, which will be held on Lake Worth, Palm Beach, Fla., March 15-16, 1910, are now out.

Theodore D. Wells, chairman of the regatta committee, believes that the list of the contests for this winter will attract a greater variety of power boats than has ever been seen before on the famous motor boat course.

Several boats are now being built for the regatta, and it is said at least, 25 entries will be made from Florida alone, Detroit and Chicago motor boat owners promise entries.

Leland Sterry, secretary of the assoqiation, is now at Palm Beach arranging the preliminaries. Entry blanks and booklet giving the various contests and rules can be obtained from Theodore D. Wells and Leland Sterry.

AMATEUR ATHLETIC

President Brown Issues His First Annual Report and Prophesies Big Things for Vaile in Golf Illustrated. Coming Year.

CHICAGO - Despite the fact that there were not any international track and field sports during the year 1909 in which teams from the Amateur Athletic Union of this country took part, the year now coming to a close proved to be most successful one for that association. Several new records were made by American athletes, the most remarkable performance probably being the estab. lishing of a new half-mile mark after years of unsuccessful effort.

President Everett C. Brown has just issued his first annual review for the year 1908 and he not only reports it as one of the best in the history of the association, but also predicts that the coming year will be more promising than any of the past. In speaking of the situation, he says:

"The international contest held in 1908 in London awakened much interest in the United States, so much so that every follower of athletics has hoped that there would be a continuation of the Olympian games held in Athens in the spring of Players Are Candidates for 1910. While there is apparently no formal notice that these games will not be held, the situation seems to be unsettled from a political standpoint, and from present indications the Olympian games will be abandoned at Athens and the next Olympian games that will be held in a foreign country will be those held in Stockholm, Sweden, in 1912; and it is certain that the United States will be well represented in those contests and the athletes representing America will give a good account of themselves.

"The prospects for athletics in the United States for 1910 are more promising than any year within my recollection. Probably the first national event to be held will be the national wrestling championships early in February. These will be followed very soon afterward by the national gymnastic championships, and then by the national basketball championships. All of these championships have been allotted to Chicago. In all probability the national indoor championships will be held the latter part of March, or the first part of April, in Chicago, but final arrangements have not been definitely settled. The swimming championships will be divided up among the largest swimming clubs in New York, Boston, St. Louis and Chicago, as these are the centers of the sport, and it would hardly of the teams is down for today, when be fair to give any one club or associachampionships for 1910 will probably be held in New Orleans some time in October. The national championship committee thought it wise to stimulate the sport in that section of he country. It has been proposed that try-outs be held in different sections of the countryproviding these games are held at New Orleans-and in this manner only the best athletes from each section of the country would be represented in the national championships. This method of preparation was tried preceding the Olympic games in London, and the splendid team which was sent abroad was the result of these trials. In my opinion, such plans could not help but benefit the

"It goes without saying that the metropolitan championships which will be held in New York city during the coming year will have more 'class' than in any year in the history of athletics, and with such splendid teams as those represented by the Irish-Américan Ath-letic Club and the New York Athletic Club, new records are promised, and there is no reason why the year 1910 should not show the climax in athletics never before reached in this country."

BRIGHT FUTURE FOR ARGENTINA

Argentina is attracting much attention by its rapid progress, says the Dallas News. Its yield of wheat this year is estimated at nearly 200,000,000 bushels, and its area is increasing. There is to be expended $60,000,000 in improving the harabor of Buenos Aires and in building a ship canal. The capital has a populaare much interested in the regatta, and tion of 1,200,000. English and Germans control most of the manufacturing and transportation.

As is well known, I used George Duncan, the famous young Hanger Hill professional, to illustrate the strokes in The slice is a "cut" stroke, played as "Modern Golf." Naturally, there is noththe club-head is returning across the line ing there about which Duncan and I are not in accord. Six weeks before I finished it I fully explained the pull to Duncan. He said, "You're wrong, Mr. Vaile."

I answered, "Then I'll stay wrong, George, and let some one put me right." and I decided that I must get someone else to illustrate that stroke or do it myself. A month later, Duncan, who "tries things out" for himself, said to me in his dry way, "You're all right about the pull," so I was able to show Duncan playing it clearly the way I indicate that it should be done.

The fact that has confused all writers is that the turn over of the hand and wrist follows after the stroke with such incredible rapidity that players think it is an integral part of the stroke, whereas it is merely part of the inevitable result of a well-played pull.

Nobody tells one to turn the wrist back at the moment of playing a slice, but it follows very naturally.

If I had any doubt about the stroke there are similar effects in other games that would corroborate my statements. This is no question of theory. It is the essence of practise, that can be proven more easily on the green than on paper, and if any one can show that my explanation is incorrect, I shall consider it my duty to spread his correction as widely as I have by explanation; for, after all, the game is the thing.

Present Administration in the Appreciation of Important Trade Relations.

EXPERTS CALLED IN

WASHINGTON-Appreciation of the tries characterizes the present administration of the department of state of the the department as well as by adding experts on Latin-American trade to the staff of the bureau of trade relations.

The action of Secretary Knox in intituting this division and in calling United States Minister Thomas C. Dawson from Chile to preside over it, dis oses of the misgivings of many friends of Latin-America lest the attention which the department must, perforce, give to affairs in other parts of the world might cause it to neglect matters in that particular region. This reassurance was further confirmed by an address delivered early in his term of office by Secretary Knox at a Pan-American dinner given by Director John Barrett of the interna tional bureau of the American republics

Assistant Secretary of State Hunting ton Wilson is an able advocate of the development of closer trade relations between the United States and Latin America; and, although his diplomatic experience-prior to entering the department of state related particularly to the the affairs of the neighboring republics Monday of Rear Admiral Nathan E. denies the use of the mails to stock of the western hemisphere and is making them the subject of special study in his present position.

Indeed, he was about to leave for Buenos Aires, where he was to assume the duties of American minister to the Argentine Republic, when he was offered the assistant secretaryship of the department. A recent speech made by him before the Chicago Association of Commerce made a deep impression by reason of his forceful presentation of the necessity for studying the trade opportunities that Latin-America offers the commercial world of the United States.

Great Debt of New York --- A Comparison

Highest Per Capita in United States; Erie, Pa., Has Lowest.

WASHINGTON-New York city's total net indebtedness for the fiscal year of 1907 was more than seven times that of any other city in the United States and more than one half of the total of the 27 largest cities as figured out by the census bureau. Of the total net indebtedness of the 158 cities of over 30,000 population New York city is credited with 39.2 per cent, the per capita being $142.52. The other cities over $100 per capita were: Cincinnati $123.85; Boston, $120.37; Galveston, $115.78; Pueblo, $108.23. San Francisco had probably the smallest net debt and Detroit, with $23.75 per capita, next to the smallest. Of cities having from 100,000 to 300,000 people, those with the smallest per capita net debt were: St. Joseph, Mo., $16.46, and Indianapolis, $17.91. Of cities having from 30,000 to 100,000, Erie, Pa., had the smallest with $10.13; then came Wheeling with $10.41; Joplin with $10.71, and Johnstown, Pa., $11.19. The increase in the net debt for the fiscal year of 1907 was $120,930,631, more than three fourths of which was credited to the fifteen largest cities.

Christian Science Monitor, Boston,

Gentlemen:-

This testimony is "but a straw." Some time ago we inserted in seventeen of the leading daily papers of this country a Want Adv. for local representatives, inserting the same also in "The Christian Science Monitor with the seemingly surprising results of ten to one applications in favor of "The Monitor" as against the combined seventeen dailies.

Naturally, even the old newspaper "guard" is kept thinking and thinking about this; undoubtedly this is a clear demonstration of quality against quantity, and "The Monitor" seems to prove "a big quantity of quality."

We have just contracted for 10,000 lines of advertising for 1910 to be used in "The Monitor"; surely this is an evidence of our faith! Yours very truly, DRY GOODS PUBLISHING

NEW YORK MARKET A STEADIER GAI

Rock Island Shows a Heavy Tendency During the Early Trading Following Its Wild Actions of Monday.

MIAMI IS ACTIVE

Following yesterday's flurry in Rock Island and a consequent unsettling of the other leading issues the New York stock market settled down today to its customary steady gait. Price movements were irregular, however, and without special direction. Interest in Rock Island was only casual. The sudden soaring of the stock to the extent of 30 points yesterday followed by a drop of the same extent was generally regretted. Einanciers complained that the incident could scarcely have occurred at a less propitious time. Europe was being scoured by Americans for possible pu. chasers of large bond iss floated and the Rock Island corner seemed to have a very unfavorable influence abroad. Foreign capitalists, it was said, have been sending many inquiries to America to learn why the stock was made to act as it did. This is still a matter to be determined. The governing body of the New York stock exchange is expected to make a thorough investigation of the incident with the purpose of preventing any future occurrences of the kind.

Rock Island opened unchaned at 511/2. sold down under 49 and then recovered partially. Some interest was taken in the copper group. Amalgamated Copper opened up 18 at 87% and improved over a point. Anaconda was off 1/4 at 513/4 at the opening and before the end of the first hour crossed 53. American Smelting opened at 102, a gain of 1/4 over last night's closing price, and improved about Central Leather was in fair demand. After opening at 47, it advanced about a The Gould issues were strong during the early sales. Denver & Ric Grande opened up 134 at 521/2 but later sold off. Wabash preferred at 601/4 was up % but lost over a point.

Miami was a prominent feature of the local market. It opened unchanged at 251/4, advanced over a point. Calumet & Arizona was off a point at the open ing at 101 but later recovered the loss North Butte opened up 1/4 at 50, improved 1/2 and then sold off nearly a point. Parrot opened at 22 and declined about two points. Price changes of other stocks were mainly fractional.

THE GRAIN MARKET.

C. F. & G. W. Eddy, Inc., of the Bos ton Chamber of Commerce, received the following from their Chicago corre

Wheat-The wheat market was active and higher on the news from the North west regarding the failure in settlement of the switchmen's strike and the firmness of the cables. The English markets were higher on Argentine reports of unfavorable weather and delay in harvest. Another cable reported colder weather again and the crop needed further time to mature. The receipts of wheat in the Northwest were larger than last week, and also larger than last year and two years ago. The Minneapolis market was comparatively strong and there were reports of considerable covering in that market. There was a good decrease in ce. the total stock of wheat at Chicago, but crease in the contract stocks. n-Was firm with fairly good buy gain. There are complaints of diffiin getting ears to ship grain and this is delaying the forward moves-Were also firmer with a fair demand during the morning on the difficulty of moving grain and fear that the labor situation in the Northwest would become more acute and still further restrict the movement of oats.

INDUSTRIAL ISSUES

At the present time, with the end of the year at hand and with the prospects of unprecedentedly large January dividend and interest disbursements to be available within a week, attention is given by conservative investors to the bond market. It offers securities with a fixed rate of interest, with safety guaranteed. and with the chances of a minimum in price fluctuations in the most popular

No matter what the nature of the demand for bonds, it is always coupled with the consideration that the security must yield a good substantial return. Yet a glance through the list of a day's bond sales on the stock exchange shows the bond market to be in a somewhat peculiar position in that the yields on the bonds which one would be most apt to recommend are actually lower in some cases, than 4 per cent.

Taking a few of the representative bonds of the highest grade at their prices within the last week, the following yields are presented on the amount of money invested in the several securi-

The bonds named are the securities which would at once come to mind if some one were asking for a bond in which to safely invest his money. But when it comes to the question of rate of, return, these securities are less satisfactory. For a person with several thousand dollars which he desires to turn into permanent investment which will give him absolutely no worry, or for banks, savings institutions or other organizations, these bonds are admirable. But to'one who wishes to combine safety with a fair return, such issues must be passed by. Nevertheless, there are many bonds to be found on the stock exchange list yielding a more liberal return, offer-ing, too, as large a degree of safety to the princip: 1 invested as any one could reasonably expect. Taking a number of these it is possible to gather together quite a representative list of bonds with yields at current prices, ranging from 4 to 5 per cent. Here are some of them, with the yields appended:

Ruskin's Profits From His Books

The profits made by Ruskin from his books were in the end very large and fully justified his belief in being pratically his own publisher. In Fors Clavigera" he wrote: "I could even sell my books for not inconsiderable sums of money if I chose to bribe the review ers, stick bills on the lampposts and say nothing but what would please the Bishop of Peterborough." George Allen, who published for Ruskin "in the middle of a country field" in Kent, told K T Cook that Ruskin's profits in 1886 wer over £4000 and that in addition he had increased a valuable stock. From on issue of "Modern Painters" he cleared £6000. Ruskin spent practically the whole of his large private fortune in various forms of benevolence and enthusi asm, and during his later years his income was wholly derived from the sale of his books.--London Chronicle.

The American Worker

When the losses and gains of the year as they appear to the sociologist are summarized and compared, one of the results to be looked for will be a showing of our advancement or retrogression as a nation of workers. Here, as in other respects, we shall be presented with conclusions drawn not from wide but from narrow observation—not from a survey of the country at large, but from that little patch of it that comes under the particular notice of the social student. Thus we find it stated in advance of the year's data, and, of course, in advance of the decennial census and the publication of the facts with which it is designed to deal, that work is not regarded with as much respect as formerly in our land. The claim is made, indeed, that as a people we are beginning to look upon labor as a burden rather than a blessing

It is unnecessary to go into a discussion of the matter. This is one of those propositions that is best disposed of when it is referred to the hard common sense of the nation. The ordinary man—the average man—in his everyday experience, is in a better position to know the truth about a matter of this kind than any mere sociologist. A great deal is written of the American leisure class, but this class exists mostly in the imagination of writers of light literature. That there are idlers in the country is true. They can be found in all ranks of society, from the very rich down to the very poor. But when we are dealing with a question bearing upon the character of 90,000,000 of people it is absurd to allude to a "leisure class" as a factor in the population.

We are a nation of workers, not less so, but rather more so, than ever before in our history. For the road to everything that success in life stands for leads through that field of effort that we recognize as honest toil.

A motion for equal pay for men and women teachers is being considered by the New York city board of education. The proposition seems rather simple: If women teachers are not as good as men they should not be employed at any price. If they are as good they should receive the pay that men would get for doing the same work.

It has been repeatedly pointed out by those interested in preserving our forests that the policy followed in some states of placing a tax upon growing trees, in addition to that levied upon the land whereon such trees grow, gives anything but practical aid to the movement to save our forests from destruction. The fifty or more years required to grow trees become burdensome in the extreme to the taxpayer who reflects that possibly this same land that is subject to increased taxation because of the growing wood could be made more profitable, in the saving of taxes, at least, if divested of the growth.

Taxing

While the immediate returns to the state in taxation from wooded land may be larger than from that which is barren, the income would no doubt be more surely maintained if a premium were offered by remitting a portion of the taxes for the continued preservation of forests. Not only are watercourses robbed of their supply, but the soil deteriorates with the failure to maintain a certain proportion of the land in growing timber. Hence such soil eventually produces practically nothing and is no longer profitable for taxation.

That a reform is needed in this policy seems apparent. It may be necessary even to amend constitutions in some states in order to give the legislatures sufficient authority for laws that will effect this reform. But the need of some such legislation has been pointed out, and this in itself is a step in the right direction.

THE explorer Shackleton says that since he was knighted it costs him twice as much as formerly to stop at hotels, while the treatment he receives is by no means twice as good. It ought to be possible, however, for a knight to keep it dark.

The New Motor Vehicle Law

The new law regulating motor vehicles in Massachusetts will be in effect in its entirety on the 1st of January. Certain sections of it—relating to the equipment of cars with brakes, muffler, warning device and lock; specifying the lighting hours, prescribing rules to be followed when approaching horse-drawn vehicles, street cars and pedestrians, and fixing the speed limit under varying conditions, went into effect on the 1st of last July. On the 1st of December the provision fixing a sliding horsepower scale became operative. On the 31st of the present month existing operators' licenses will be cancelled, and every person operating a machine must obtain a new permit. Exemption is made here of chauffeurs' licenses, as these have been and will remain on an annual basis. Everybody who operates a machine for hire must be provided with a chauffeur's license, with the exception of manufacturers' agents, proprietors of garages and leaders.

Henceforth operators' licenses will not be granted to persons under sixteen years of age, and chauffeurs must be eighteen years old in order to obtain a permit to operate machines for hire. In case he or she is accompanied by a licensed operator or chauffeur, an unlicensed person may drive a car, but at the risk of the licensed attendant. That is to say, the latter will be held liable for any violation of the law.

Under the new law, penalties for carelessness and misbehavior are much heavier than they have been. Particularly is this the case with regard to offenses due to intoxication. The maximum fine for offenses coming under this head has been raised from $100 to $200, and for a second conviction imprisonment is provided of not less than one year nor more than two years.

It will be pleasing to the general public, as well as to all thoughtful operators of motor vehicles—and greatly so to the automobile trade, which has suffered from the careless and incompetent operator—that the new law demands much greater caution in the handling of the machines, and more trustworthy records of persons hiring vehicles of garage keepers. It seems to be the aim of the new law in all particulars to throw such safeguards around the use of these vehicles as will make for the safety and comfort of the public without placing unnecessary restrictions upon the operator. The faithful enforcement of the enactment should result in some very desirable improvements.

In his purpose of finding out whether this nation is any wider from west to east than it is from east to west, Edward Pay on Weston, who has more than once walked it from the Atlantic to the Pacific, will, in January, set out from Los Angeles to walk to New York. He will learn at any rate that he will be allowed about three hours less in which to make the trip than he would were he to go toward the setting sun. But what are a few hours to a chipper pedestrian over 70-on a gay little jaunt of some 3000 miles.

Talk Well

Your City

The Toronto (Ont.) Mail and Empire recounts the story of a young man, a citizen of the Dominion, who recently visited several cities of the States. He brought back with him some impressions of one of our cities in particular—Minneapolis, Minn.—and, in the opinion of our contemporary, Canadian cities might consider his views with great profit. The truth is, the lesson of this young man's experience should prove as interesting to communities on this as on the other side of the border. It amounts to this; that everybody he met in Minneapolis spoke well of the town. "Of the many people he met there," says our informant, "he found not one who was not enthusiastic about the city. The conversation seldom ended without the other party giving it a turn to the popular theme—Minneapolis."

Now, this young man not only listened in Minneapolis to praise of its places of interest, its progress, its prospects, its advantages as an industrial center, as a place of residence, and so on, but he stored these things in his mind, took them over to Toronto, talked to the editor of the Mail and Empire about them, and got the latter interested in them to the extent that he sat down and wrote an editorial extolling handsomely the civic pride of the Minnesota city.

The lesson the Toronto editor draws from the young Canadian's enthusiasm—or, rather, from the cause of it—is that pride of city is something that would be both becoming and useful on his side of the line. While Minneapolis is not the only city in the United States where the young Canadian might have found a similar measure of local pride and enthusiasm, there are many cities in this country, be it said with regret, in which public sentiment is so tinctured with criticism of everything local that the visitor is led to wonder why, under all the circumstances, the complaining residents who talk for those places do not move away.

It is rather a trite way of putting it, we know, but this does not prevent it from being true, that a city is what its citizens make it. If a city is not what it ought to be, this is generally the fault of the citizens who content themselves with criticizing it.

A CENSUS of the metropolis of Argentina just taken reveals the fact that it has a population of 1,189,602. Whether we do it through subsidy, through subvention, or through ordinary every-day American enterprise, it is clearly to our interest to get into closer commercial touch with Buenos Aires. This city is said to double its population every 15 years. This would make it as populous in 1924 as Chicago is today, or nearly so, and by that time the people of Buenos Aires should be educated out of knowing more about other parts of the world than they know of the United States.

It is significant of the trend of the times that the authorities of Columbia University are thinking of establishing a great agricultural college. This is in response to a belief, well founded, that good farming is as necessary to the East as to any other part of the country.

The Postoffice Deficit

The excess of expenditures over receipts in the postoffice department for the last fiscal year was nearly $17,500,000. Two causes are assigned for the apparent loss. One is the carriage of second-class matter and the other the rural free delivery system. To overcome the deficit the postmaster-general recommends a substantial increase in the postal rates. It seems to be necessary that intelligent discussion of the postal service, outside of the department, shall turn periodically to the theory upon which it is established. It is natural and praiseworthy that the head of a department of the government should wish to make the best possible financial showing at the end of each year. It is never a pleasant task to explain a deficit, and much less to apologize for

Assuming that extravagances have been eliminated and that the service is being managed with first regard for the public convenience and comfort, there is no popular expectancy of a showing of profit in its conduct. That is, not in the ordinary, or direct way. The profits that are derived from the operation of the postoffice department are not such as can be put into figures in an annual report. They are not direct. But they are none the less substantial.

Seventeen million five hundred thousand dollars is a large sum unquestionably, but it is small compared with the results, in dollars and cents, to say nothing about moral consequences, from the wide-spread diffusion of literature throughout the land. The vast amount of reading matter distributed in this country at a nominal rate—at an apparent loss—may not all be useful, but most of it is, and the rural delivery that enables the farmer to share in this distribution equally with the city dweller is one of the things that are contributing to the comfort of farm life and to the value of farm property.

The country can well afford the postoffice deficit, providing that it is as low as competent management can make it.

A READER protests' in a contemporary against the American pronunciation of "job." This is absurd. There is no country in which greater care is taken not only to pronounce it properly but to value it properly.

EVEN if the parcels post should increase the annual deficit in the postoffice department, there would be no serious complaint on that score, either.

ICEMEN here and there are advised to cut the ice early, even if it is thin, since waiting for thick ice very frequently results in disappointment and high freight charges.

ZELAYA's arrival at Salina Cruz on board the Mexican gunboat General Guerrero eliminates him, but not his influence. There is one factor that makes Zelaya's choice of Mexico for his place of retreat rather regretable and that is the presence in that country of a considerable number of Central American exiles, nearly all bitterly hostile to President Cabrera of Guatemala and consequently well disposed toward his rival Zelaya. Nobody who knows anything about Central Assuppose for a moment that the former President

The Change In Central America body who knows anything about Central American affairs can suppose for a moment that the former President's transfer from Nicaragua to Mexico closes the Zelaya regime. This regime still includes the present government of Honduras and the future government of Costa Rica, aside from the new executive of Nicaragua, of whose independence legitimate doubt may be expressed. On Mexican soil Zelaya meets a number of anti-Cabrera exiles with widespread connections admirably suited for political intrigue, and since the Zelaya-Cabrera rivalry has of late assumed a dominant role in Central American affairs, the United States finds itself much more closely engaged in the situation than would have been the case had Zelaya gone elsewhere or even had he remained in a secluded corner of his republic. It is idle to ignore the fact that Mexico is distinctly friendly toward the former Nicaraguan President.

In these circumstances the only possible policy of the United States is one of resolute constructiveness, instead of passive vigilance. The comment of Director Barrett of the bureau of American republics, on the transfer of Minister Fenton R. McCreery from Santo Domingo to Tegucigalpa, Honduras, is pithy: "Mr. McCreery's new assignment gives him a great constructive opportunity. Honduras is a country of great resources, with tremendous opportunity for development." Honduras is likewise the key to Central America, since it is situated between Guatemala and Nicaragua and east of that most densely settled and most progressive, though smallest, of the republiquitas, El Salvador. Honduras is also notable in that it presents a long coast line with some good harbors to the south of the United States, forming a natural stepping-stone to Central America, and in that its very sparsely peopled area affords a rare opportunity for Anglo-Saxon settlement in the midst of Spanish America. It is difficult to see how constructiveness in isthmian America is possible without strictly white colonization, not to displace but certainly to give balance to the mixed Spanish-speaking races. Were it not for the mingling of the Indian, negro and Spanish stocks, Central America would have had a very different history, as is best illustrated by conditions and developments in Costa Rica. There the pure Spanish descent of the settlers has obviated the confusion of the other republics. White settlement of Central America is not only possible but probable, at least on the Caribbean, with American, Creole and British interests and colonies from Panama to Yucatan.

The government blue book shows 370,065 persons on the federal payroll. It is easy to understand in view of this why Secretary of the Treasury MacVeagh is anxious to get everything in.

Shakespeare in France Last spring a company was formed in Paris for popularizing Shakespeare in France.—M. Camille de Sainte-Croix is the founder of this "Compagnie Francaise du Theatre Shakespeare, which made its first public appearance, a few weeks ago, in the Femina theater. On that occasion a number of sonnets and monologues were recited by a number of young artists, who won hearty applause. From that prelude, of course, no prognostication is possible as to the success of the winter program, which includes a number of Shakespeare's comedies; but the prospects for this interesting experiment appear favorable. In the past all attempts to bring Shakespeare's genius nearer the Gallic spirit failed, notwithstanding translations and interpreta-But if only very little has been accomplished in three centuries, M. de Sainte-Croix is confident that a fresh start, an entirely new departure, discarding both the English and the German traditions, will bring admirable results. He bases his undertaking on the idea that the genius of Shakespeare stands above the race distinctions of the entire western civilization and that each nationality can comprehend him through its own racial genius. This is very interesting when it is remembered that one of the foremost exponents of the Slavic genius, Count Tolstoi, not long ago spoke with the utmost contempt of Shakespeare, that the profound comprehension and appreciation that Shakespeare for generations has found in Germany is by the Germans themselves attributed to the supposed ultra-Teutonic character of his concepts, and finally that despite the brilliant interpretations of Shakespearian characters by Salvini, Rossi, and more recently, Novelli, the Italian public has never been impressed with any but the purely dramatic element of Shakespeare's works. But the Compagnie Française du Theatre Shakespeare means to make Frenchmen forget even Voltaire's rather cheap sarcasms on the subject of Shakespeare's, plays. It is the concept of M. de Sainte-Croix to emphasize the poetic thought rather than the dramatic form; above all he means to eliminate the supremacy of the stage carpenter and the monopoly of the star. But he will have to show that in so doing he is not exclusively swayed by the French tradition of cultivating an appeal to reason rather than feeling by a form perfected at the expense of spontaneity.

However, it is a fact worth noting that this attempt at popularizing Shakespeare in France coincides with Meta Illing's English theater in Germany as well as with the growing popularity of American operatic artists on the European continent—a singularly auspicious constellation for Anglo-Saxon dramatic art.

The Andes have ever stood as the great barrier between Chile and Argentina, but these two progressive nations have now overcome it by tunneling under it. The completion of this tunnel and, subsequently, the Panama canal, will leave the dangerous straits of Magellan less crowded with craft than has heretofore been the case with so much of the world's traffic forced to go about Cape Horn. History may well record this as being the era of short cuts. The world is learning to distinguish its needs, in every field of human purpose and endeavor, and to go after them in a straight bee line as it never has done before.

Nothing has been told us about the north pole that creates any enthusiasm with regard to the possible future discovery of the south pole.
